

The Telecom industry needs more competition, not less. Were it not for competition the information industry would still be locked into the era of Guttenberg.

America needs less and less expensive access to the Internet. Recent experience in Korea and Japan with very inexpensive access to the Internet and telecommunications shows that economic growth can be aided if not fostered by decreasing the cost of internet access.